Many thanks for your letter.

First I wish to congratulate the government in getting rid of this totally useless and wasteful former government the result is that after (50) years of working in and for the UK – I am penniless and living on social security.

I have complained to the former government since 1997 – about the theft of my intellectual property by employees of various government business support agencies – to whom I have applied to for assistance in getting my business started, they have passed my complaints from (a to b) and have never taken any action.

As a direct result of all these thefts – I have been forced to live in abject poverty and have survived social security payments and since aged (65) on a government pension – social security in the form of housing benefit and pension credit.

Bearing in mind that the former government removed access to legal aid for civil litigation cases - my continuing complaints resulted in your recent letter and is the result of my determination that I should get justice for all the illegal actions against me by these government agencies.

The projects that I have developed since (1995) benefits the UK small business community – my latest project, a training programme for firms and individuals who wish to learn how to tender for public sector contracts has been through (3) separate accreditation processes – the latest by (ITOL) the Institute for Training and Occupational Learning - and endorsed by the (SFEDI) Small Firms Enterprise Development Initiative.

My fundamental problem has been and is because (a) the first business project was stolen I do not have the funds to promote this new project – so I again approach government agencies for help and again they steal the programme and pass it off as their own, all my complaints are supported by (11) witness statements for both incidents.

I realise that your time is extremely precious at the start of the new parliament – hence I politely request that you view de tails of all incidents here: <http://www.tfc-training.com/ipt.htm>

In spite of all these terrible injustices against me – I still continue to try to make a contribution to the UK society – with no resources except sheer determination.

I conclude that all the departments that I have complained to – have investigated themselves – with well known results – the responses hare attached - also attached is a letter from the prime minister's office – I have never received any response from this department.

Regards,

Lloyd Sewell
